

British Army Succession of Titles: Signals

Although the Royal Corps of Signals was established in the summer of 1920, its roots reach back to 1870 when the Royal Engineers formed the first dedicated unit: 'C' Telegraph Troop. Having been expanded and seeing action in the Anglo-Zulu War, in 1884 the Troop was now formed into the Telegraph Battalion Royal Engineers. Before the Great War, the word 'telegraph' was replaced with 'signal' and these signallers communicated via wireless sets and motorcycle despatch riders to great effect. Today, "the Royal Signals are leaders in IT, Cyber and Telecommunications, providing battle winning communications to every part of the Army" (Source: British Army).

As with the other resources in this series, the focus is on regiments. Depots and battalions are included only where they became or were later amalgamated into regiments.
