

British Army Regimental Succession of Titles: Special Forces

'Special Forces' are trained and equipped to undertake specialist and often unconventional tasks. As such, their role and make-up alters over time to meet the challenges of the day. While some regiments and units are easily recognisable as fitting within this title and definition, others may be added to and removed from the auspices of the Directorate of UK Special Forces (UKSF). Additionally, since their inception during the Second World War, UK special forces include elements of the British Army, Royal Navy and Royal Air Force. As special forces operations were rather experimental during the Second World War, unlike most of our other guides, some units smaller than regiments are shown here.

In summary, this guide presents regiments in the Directorate of UK Special Forces (UKSF) as of 2026, and their antecedents. It also includes special operations support forces such as the Parachute Regiment and special operations-capable forces like the Ranger Regiment. Therefore, some of the regiments included here may also appear in other guides. As units of the Special Air Service (Reserve), 21 SAS(R) and 23 SAS(R) are not included in this document.
